Are people interested in museums nowadays?

Summarizing all the information I've got I can tell that the best museum, according to Social Statistics, is British Museum. It's attendance has been increasing each year. Talking about galleries, it's National Gallery.

In 2013 4 out of 5 museums and galleries had not had less than 2 millions visitors. The lowest attendance has Tate Gallery. However, later the Natural History Museum and Science Museum visits had decreased and couldn't reach even 2 million, while British Museum and National Gallery's statistics were almost three bigger. In 2017 Tate Gallery finally got his first 2 millions.

As we can see, some museums and galleries had big problems with attendance for years. I have some recommendations for them. First of all, pay attention at the atmosphere. Even if it's the oldest building on Earth, you have to keep it clean and pleasant to visit. Secondly, do not forget about guides, make sure they are qualified and know all the facts perfectly. Check if they are being nice enough, service makes sense. Finally, do not forget about technologies. You can rarely find someone using cash. That's why you ought to make it more convenient for people to buy your tickets. Do more ads, that will definitely help you to attract more people.

In conclusion, you must remember your history, that will help you to make your future light and bright. We have to pass all historical things to next generation so they can learn about the past as well.
